Anyone whoâ™s ever been married or knows someone who has can understand what happens when their other half, whom theyâ™d deeply love, suddenly dies; the grieving can continue afterwards. And one of the few places they can find a safe refuge is at work. Dr. Kate Swigert is such a person, who three months earlier had lost her husband, Dr. Cal Swigert, after his six years of fighting cancer. Kate thought after three months sheâ™d stop receiving condolence letters and cards reminding her of his death, but it didnâ™t; and as lâ™ve already, the workplace can become a wonderful sanctuary, and Kate it did. Having worked in a hospital environment for over 30 years lâ™ve how it is each time when a new influx of residents arrived to anxiously begin the final leg in their journey of becoming a real doctor. The doctor assigned to them knows what to expect, usually thereâ™s no problem; except this time of the residents Kate gets is becoming a pain for her to deal with. Dr. Tabitha Kearns is that thorn. Tabitha is a nervous young woman who happens to be a lesbian and the mistakes sheâ™s been making so far is putting her career in danger of ending before it even has begun. But then something happened which would change everything. For some reason the death of a young patient unnerves Kate in a way sheâ™s never been before. She knows she already had patients dying in her care before; but she never reacted the way she did this time; perhaps itâ™s the still recent death of her husband on her mind which is the cause now. When Tabithaâ™s sensitivity senses this, she knows she must step in and try to comfort Kate.
