Very impressive book! This book gives easy to follow practical advice on how to stay focused. It's more of a tactical book than an inspirational one, and sometimes we need less passion and more precision. There's no fluff in this book. It's not intended to make you feel all warm and fuzzy inside. This book is a guide with useful information that allows you to create a strategy for focusing that's built around your unique personality. Really worth reading!

I do three types of job in a day, I have one that i count to be my major and others my minor job. I was looking for something that will help me be productive and focused for each week that i sit down to work. I have learn from the author to be productive i need to be focused and have organized kind of timetable to follow. I will need to give my major task best of the time in my morning and avoid distractions. With proposed strategy by the author, i am surprise i will even get time for friends, exercises and get enough sleep unlike how i have been sleeping at 12am and wake up at 7am and yet i don't find myself productive. My point of action is to get a spreadsheet for each week and plan my schedule accordingly.

Renil has managed to set up a superior system of regaining and maximizing your focus. I knew goal setting was good, but I was kind of lost as to how to go about making my goals a reality. I'm a huge procrastinator and I really needed this book. I have a lot of plans and really have big dreams, I have a clear blueprint of what I want to do but I get really distracted easily. I know I need help in this self-help department and I am glad to have found this book. It just helped me understand myself better and why I get distracted and procrastinate. It has given me things that I want to try like arranging my order of the day, how to prioritize my things-to-do. I realize that I tend to lay out a lot of tasks that are unproductive. This has given me a different perspective on how to plan better and just ditch the unnecessary. Hopefully I'd get better. Nice read.

This book has been recommended to me by my friend because she knows I need to get rid of my habit which is procrastination. This book introduces me to The Sniper Focus System which talks about the difference between distraction and procrastination and how I can eliminate them. It also taught me how to stick with the goal that I set for myself and lastly is how to create the proper environment for me to be able to focus well with my work.

I always have a lot of distractions in my life. Who doesn't? I went searching for a book on how to clear things up and try and avoid distractions. I found Focus: by Renil M. George. I love it. It has taught me so many tips and tricks on how to concentrate better and improve my mental focus. I will highly recommend this book to all my friends. Check it out. It's great.
